

Abstract of the Disclosure

A computer system which dynamically extracts multiple threads from a program using a thread binary compiler (TBC), and a simultaneous multithreading (SMT) method. The computer system loads the TBC to a cache and controls the cache such that the TBC divides the program into multiple threads, and the cache loads the program as a recompiled program, whenever the cache loads a program stored in main memory.